ADMIRAL WARNS SAILORS

Many Wounded In Battle For Barracks; Uprising Spreads To Karachi

BOMBAY, Feb. 21—Mutiny in the ranks of the Royal Indian Navy erupted in bloody violence today, prompting a threat by Vice-Admiral John Henry Godfrey to put down the insurrection at all costs, even the destruction of the fleet itself.

Mutinous sailors seized control of several ships in the Bombay harbor and fought a pitched battle with British and Indian troops around the castle barracks in the center of the city.

Godfrey, commander of the Royal Indian Navy, broadcast a stern warning from Bombay headquarters in the face of the spreading mutiny.

Godfrey said the government was determined to use its overwhelming forces "to their uttermost, even if it means the destruction of the Navy, which we have been so proud."

The government, Godfrey said, will "never give in to violence." He told the mutineers that it was "the height of folly" to continue the struggle.

Tentative reports on the battle of the barracks, where a band of sailors were barricaded and holding out against besieging troops said at least 20 persons had been wounded. No authoritative casualty report was available.

Riots Last Four Days

The sailors have been rioting for four days after striking for faster demobilization and better service conditions. Uprisings spread to Karachi and other points in India.

Mutineers seized control of several Navy ships in the Bombay harbor and gave dockworkers a 10-minute ultimatum to get out. The dock workers fled.

Another large group of sailors, barricaded in the castle barracks, fought an hours-long battle with troops summoned to subdue them. The sailors were armed with machineguns and rifles stolen from an armory.

Military pickets drove the sailors into the barracks at bayonet point last night. During the night the mutineers broke into the armory, armed themselves and built log barricades.

Machine Guns On Walls

The mutineers posted men with machineguns along walls of the barracks and opened fire on the Army guards. More than 500 British and Indian soldiers were rushed up as reinforcements.

Business and traffic was paralyzed in the center of Bombay. The chaotic scene resembled a wartime street battle. The Red Cross set up medical headquarters, and (Continued on Page Two)

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 21—Twenty-nine of the 32 new cardinals elected this week receive their ceremonial broad-brimmed red hats today at the public consistory in St. Peter's cathedral as the weeklong series of colorful ceremonies neared its close.

The hats, symbol of the cardinal rank, are laid aside after the consistory and do not appear again until they are placed on the casket of the recipient after his death.

Thousands At Ceremony

The ceremony, attended by 12,000 to 15,000 persons marks the first time the new cardinals mingle with the old cardinals.

Tomorrow both old and new cardinals will attend a private consistory which will end the week's program.

In the most colorful of the week's rites, the new cardinals received their scarlet birettas from Pope Pius XII yesterday and heard the pontiff in an address, broadcast to the world, denounce imperialism as a menace to peace.

Note Expected To Delay Report On Activities Of Spy Ring

OTTAWA, Feb. 21—The Canadian cabinet met today to approve the government's reply to a Russian note handed a Canadian representative in Moscow yesterday.

Text of the Russian note was not disclosed, but it was presumed to be an official protest against the Canadian government's disclosure of the activities of an alleged Soviet espionage ring without first consulting the Soviet government.

Note Seen As Reply

In effect, the note was expected to be a follow-up of a Soviet statement broadcast by the Moscow radio, which admitted that the Russians received "certain information of a secret character" about radio location and atomic energy.

Consideration of the reply to the Russian note was expected to delay an official report on the activities of the spy ring. The royal commission studying the evidence against the espionage agents originally was scheduled to make public its findings today.

Information sources in Ottawa said it was clear now that the activities of the spy ring were worldwide and not just confined to Ottawa.

Sabotage Planned

They believed the Communist party and fellow traveller organizations comprised part of its machinery. In Canada its purpose was to gather information relative to the country's defenses and to sabotage defense plans now being made for the protection of the Arctic frontier.

the dais as Cardinal Glennon's name was called.

The stately 83-year-old dean of American prelates who has served St. Louis as bishop for 42 years, stepped toward the throne with a long stride.

He performed three acts of reverence and mounted the steps of the dais to kneel and kiss the Pope's foot. The Pope and his aides then placed cardinal's red silk cap on his shoulders and adjusted around his neck a pectoral cross suspended by a red and gold cord.

The Pope then took the biretta from an attendant and placed it on Cardinal Glennon's head. The cardinal immediately removed the biretta, rose and embraced the Pope. Unexpectedly he remained grasping the Pope's hand and murmured a few words that brought a smile to the Pope's face.

Mooney Sixth In Line
Then he moved down the steps and seated himself next to Cardinal Aganianian as the ceremony proceeded.

Cardinal Mooney was the sixth to appear before the Pope. Cardinal Stritch the eighth and Cardinal Spellman the 14th.

Cardinal Spellman was almost lost in the crowd while awaiting his turn. He peered through the rows of guards and occasionally craned his neck in an attempt to view the proceedings.

As he neared the head of the line, photographers jockeyed for position. When his name was announced and he began walking toward the throne a great flashing of photographers' bulbs testified to his worldwide fame.

After all of the Cardinals received their birettas, Cardinal Aganianian spoke from the steps of the throne thanking the Pope in behalf of all of the 32 new princes of the church.

Pope's Talk Broadcast
The Pope's broadcast speech was in response to the address. As he finished the address he pronounced a benediction ending the ceremony.

The Americans and their parties met in the Sistine chapel and with others donned for the first time their cardinal sashes trimmed with gold, and returned to their residences.

Cardinals Spellman, Mooney and Stritch dined at their residences and then attended an informal reunion of alumni of the American college.

Cardinal Glennon retired early in view of today's long ceremony.

Gave Information

Information given the RCMP by Krivitsky several years ago was believed to have been invaluable in the investigation of the plot to steal secret military information from Canada.

Krivitsky hid in Ottawa under the protection of the RCMP for three months several years ago. At that time, he feared that an attempt would be made on his life.

It was believed that information given by Krivitsky was brought up to date by Ivor Goseko, the young Soviet embassy employee whose tip led to discovery of the spy ring. Goseko is now in hiding under the protection of the Canadian police. His whereabouts are so secret that only two persons in Canada know where he is.

Adams Is Ringleader
All the suspects were believed to be Canadians. The Ottawa Evening Journal said yesterday that the ringleader of the Russian agents was Arthur Adams.

Adams, known to have resided in New York for several years, has been in the pay of the Soviet espionage service since 1938, The Journal said.

Both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the RCMP have had Adams under surveillance for some time, the journal said, but delayed arresting him out of deference to an allied power.

Some sources here linked the death of Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky, former chief Soviet Intelligence agent in Western Europe, to the spy ring. Krivitsky died mysteriously.

The Broncs are given a rating of 55.9.

Chillicothe retains the lead in the southern section and second place in the state with a rating of 70.5. Benedictine of Cleveland leads the state with 74.7.

Russia's protest, which came before the Canadian government accused the Soviet government officially, was regarded in diplomatic quarters as a prelude to breaking relations with Canada. Russia, observers pointed out, used the same tactics with Finland in 1939 prior to breaking off relations.

The Canadian government closed in on the ring last Friday when Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested persons suspected of giving secret information to members of the Soviet Foreign mission.

the day as Cardinal Glennon's name was called.

The stately 83-year-old dean of American prelates who has served St. Louis as bishop for 42 years, stepped toward the throne with a long stride.

He performed three acts of reverence and mounted the steps of the dais to kneel and kiss the Pope's foot. The Pope and his aides then placed cardinal's red silk cap on his shoulders and adjusted around his neck a pectoral cross suspended by a red and gold cord.

The Pope then took the biretta from an attendant and placed it on Cardinal Glennon's head. The cardinal immediately removed the biretta, rose and embraced the Pope. Unexpectedly he remained grasping the Pope's hand and murmured a few words that brought a smile to the Pope's face.

Mooney Sixth In Line

Then he moved down the steps and seated himself next to Cardinal Aganianian as the ceremony proceeded.

Cardinal Mooney was the sixth to appear before the Pope, Cardinal Stretch the eighth and Cardinal Spellman the 14th.

Cardinal Spellman was almost lost in the crowd while awaiting his turn. He peered through the rows of guards and occasionally craned his neck in an attempt to view the proceedings.

As he neared the head of the line, photographers jockeyed for position. When his name was announced and he began walking toward the throne a great flashing of photographers' bulbs testified to his worldwide fame.

After all of the Cardinals received their birettas, Cardinal Aganianian spoke from the steps of the throne thanking the Pope in behalf of all of the 32 new princes of the church.

Pope's Talk Broadcast

The Pope's broadcast speech was in response to the address. As he finished the address he pronounced a benediction ending the ceremony.

The Americans and their parties met in the Sistine chapel and with others donned for the first time their cardinal sashes trimmed with gold, and returned to their residences.

Cardinal Spellman, Mooney and Stretch dined at their residences and then attended an informal reunion of alumni of the American college.

Cardinal Glennon retired early in view of today's long ceremony.

Chief McCrady declared that Rouen is a parolee from the Utah State Penitentiary where he allegedly served time for murder. Nichols and the woman gave their addresses as Huntington, W. Va. Chief McCrady quoted them as stating they had been "picked up" by Rouen in the western section of the country.

Denver police will be asked, Chief McCrady said, whether they want any of the trio returned there to face the auto theft charge.

The Sinclair Refining company has announced plans for the immediate construction of an extensive petroleum research laboratory at Harvey, Illinois, according to a statement made here Thursday by the local agent, T. W. White. He said:

"The project at Harvey will provide new and enlarged quarters for the research and development laboratories now located at East Chicago. The laboratories are the only part of the company's East Chicago facilities which will move to the new location. When completed, the size of the laboratories will be practically doubled and the staff will include more than 550 persons. Work in the new laboratories will be expanded to include further uses of petroleum in the fields of plastics, rubber, medicine, household conveniences, etc., and will accelerate many of the wartime developments of fuels and lubricants to civilian usage."

MEXICO ARTISTS TO REDECORATE WALLS IN ROME

Rivera, Orozco, Siqueiros Get Commission Through American Girl

ROME, Feb. 21—Because an American girl found them a wall to paint on, three of Mexico's foremost artists will splash new culture over Fascist symbols in Rome's Foro Mussolini.

Diego Rivera, Jose Clemente Orozco and David Alfaro Siqueiros, famous Mexican artists, have received telegrams inviting them to Italy to resurface the Foro with their renowned frescoes.

Then the Foro, which was Mussolini's center for training Fascist youth, will be re-dedicated to a new Italy.

The American who recognized the Foro walls as an excellent starting point for promoting cultural good will among nations is Ione Robinson, New York City, an artist whose book, "A Wall To Paint On," will be published soon.

CONCRETE BLOCK PLANT STARTED IN CIRCLEVILLE

Dewey Speakman and son, George, have opened a cement block plant in the former Carper dairy barn at the end of Watt St.

The Speakmans are operating two automatic block-tamping machines. They report a nice backlog of orders, due largely to an increased demand for concrete blocks in sidewalk cafes. She was disillusioned. But while walking through the streets of Florence, she saw the beautiful works of art in open display in the streets.

"I realized it was the people's art, truly, and I sensed the importance of art being for the people," she said.

However, Mussolini's Black Shirts were beginning their dynamic rise to power, so she looked for a place where appreciation of art was not clouded by political beliefs. At 18, she arrived in Mexico, where Rivera and Orozco, impressed by her talent, permitted her to work with them.

Fears Art Sterility
"As an artist, I feel the world shouldn't be divided into four great powers," she said. "Even if a nation does not have political influence and power, it may have something more important for humanity—a spiritual energy. If this theory of power-through-politics persists, in 100 years we may have a cultural and spiritual barrenness worse than the atomic bomb."

She feels the Mexican artists' visit to Italy will be culturally important, because they will bring Mexican culture to Italy and take Italian culture back to Mexico.

TAXES INCREASE 37-FOLD FROM 1902 TO 1944

Per Capita Assessments In U. S. Amount To $380
In Latter Year

From Roosevelt to Roosevelt, the American tax bill for federal, state and local governments skyrocketed from $1,387,000,000, in 1902 to $52,195,000,000 in 1944, according to new articles prepared for the 1946 printing of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The articles on taxation were written by Walter W. Heller, assistant to the director of tax research, U. S. Department of the Treasury, and by Dr. Mabel Newcomer, professor of economics at Vassar College.

Increase Is 37-Fold

This rise, through two wars and seven presidential careers, means Americans are paying their various governmental bodies more than 37 times as much taxes today as they did at the beginning of the century.

During that time the state and local government tax bill went up from $861,000,000 to $10,067,000, almost a twelve-fold increase, the Britannica figures show, while federal taxes, going from $526,- 000,000 in 1902 to $42,128,000,000 in 1944 went up 80 times their Theodore Roosevelt total.

As late as 1941 state and local taxes combined exceeded those of the federal government, but the financial demands of World War II quickly altered that ratio.

Taxes levied by all the individual 48 states in 1941 totalled $4,499,- 000,000, slightly less than the $4,- 606,000,000 raised by lower governmental bodies. In that year the federal government collected $7,- 818,000,000, or about 46% of the total 1941 tax bill, which was $16,- 923,000,000.

3 Billions In 2 Years
These figures alone were $3,- 235,000,000 higher than the total 1939 taxes, levied before Hitler's armies marched into Poland. During the course of the second World War state and local government taxes went up about 22%, while the federal government's tax collections were multiplied almost eight times. The 1939 and 1944 federal government taxes were respectively $5,480,000,000 and $42,- 128,000,000.

The United States' policy of deficit spending, utilized in World War I and resumed under the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, presaged similar methods of war financing utilized by Great Britain and Canada, another section of the Britannica tax articles points out.

In 1939 the United States collected in taxes only 57% of its actual expenditures, while Canada collected in taxes 83% of its expenses, and England remained completely in the black by collecting 120% of its expenditures in taxes.

Collection Ratio Lags

But by 1944 the United States' ratio of tax collections to expenditures was 43% while Canada's was 49% and Britain's 53%. Per capita total taxes, state and local, in the United States in 1944 were $380.
Canada collected $263 and Great Britain $294 in the same year.

However, as the Britannica article points out, "valid international tax comparisons are notoriously difficult to make, and no measuring rod thus far developed avoids all pitfalls. Countries differ markedly in standards of living, purchasing power of money, distribution of income and subjective burdens depend in part on how fast taxes have been increased."

From 1939 to 1944 the British tax increased about three times, the Canadian tax approximately three and one-third times, and the United States' combined federal and local taxes almost four times.

CIRCLEVILLE'S BANK BALANCE TOTALS $35,901

Cash amounting to $35,901.36 remained in the city treasury as of February 19, according to Councilman Donald Mason. That figure, he said, is the total balance in the various municipal funds over and above expenditures.

Councilman Mason listed the figures as follows:

General fund, $15,372.10; sewage disposal, $6,476.74; library, $5,129.35; auto street repair, $2,- 195.65; gasoline tax, $2,067.40; and hospital, $4,660.12.

NEW RECORDING DEVICE MAY EASE STENOGRS' WORK

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 21—It's going to be easy going for the stenographers of the future—or maybe there won't be any.

Dr. Paul S. Helmick, head of the department of physics at Drake University, predicts that a spool of wire will replace both the students' and the stenographers' notebooks.

The device would record dictation by means of magnetic impressions on reels of fine wire. There would be no need of taking notes.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh
Bird's-Eye View of America

A fellow took an aerial photograph of our town, and it makes the place look like Utopia.

Folks argued that the new firehouse would never look well beside the old Town Hall. But they harmonize perfectly from the air. One side of the railroad tracks looks as good as the other. All the different landmarks blend in nicely with surroundings.

From where I sit, there's a lesson in that photograph. A community's made up of different elements—people as well as landmarks. Some

FOOD FOR PEACE

In war an army travels on its stomach.

For peace a people must have enough to eat. The American people have been startled into realization that hundreds of millions in Europe and Asia face starvation unless this country shares her luxury. Food is of the first news interest. President Truman has given official voice to what has been known for months to officials of the state and agriculture departments, to some members of congress, to private relief agencies, to UNRRA workers.

The average American had some realization of world hunger but was lulled into a willing disregard of it by the lifting of rationing. America, gorging herself on a post-war eating and drinking spree, suddenly is faced with having some "gray" bread on her menu, a trifle less meat, thinner spreads of butter, not so much whiskey, less candy and cake! In this first half of 1946, Europe must have 12,000,000 tons of wheat. This takes no account of 100,000,000 people of India now dying of starvation.

Americans are grumbling a bit, and will do so until their government can get them caught up on the facts. One of the main facts is that sharing-the-food is not entirely a humanitarian dictate. It is a political necessity. Hungry millions are ripe for any leadership that promises relief. Fascism thrives on hunger. Communism beckons with hints of better living. If America wishes to have her ideology of democracy survive, she must assume her responsibility in the family of nations.

BLUM AND HIS JOB

LEON Blum will make a good Ambassador Extraordinary to the United States and Great Britain. This new special post is fittingly given to the former French premier, who represents what is best in his country's public life. When in office he did his utmost to break the grip of the "60 families", the clique of French bankers and industrialists who had controlled the country for their own profit, the welfare of France being secondary. It was from this group that the cry came in protest against Blum's reforming legislation, "Better Hitler than Blum!" They were justly punished by getting their wish.

After years in a German prison camp, to which both his prominence and his race condemned him, Blum does not now feel equal to taking a post in the government. His job as special envoy to France's two closest allies will be lighter, and something he is admirably qualified to perform.

Remember when Russia was thought to be so fumbling and inefficient that she could not possibly be a menace to anybody?

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—A few lively fellows with money to invest in something besides the stock markets are showing a keen appreciation for the future of television and motion picture making in the New York Metropolitan area. Since television and movies are closer than blood brothers, they may have something there.

Up in Yonkers, which is a subway nap and a street car hop from Times Square, W. Horace Schmidlapp is putting some of his Cincinnati fortune into the building of a $500,000 movie and television studio at Central and Tuckahoe avenues. The name of his firm is Associated Filmakers, Inc., and Stanley Neal is the president. This is the same Schmidlapp who married movie star Carole Landis a few months ago and who bowed out of a career as a Broadway producer last fall after presenting an operetta called "Polonaise," now on tour.

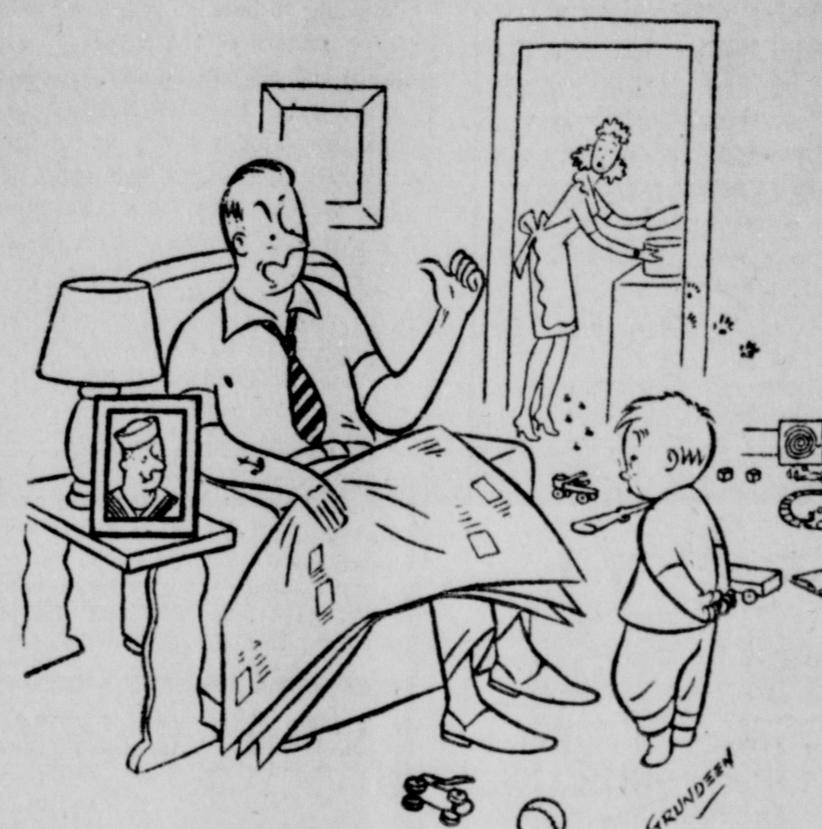

Associated filmmakers hopes that the studio will be ready for operations by July 1. Building materials shortages have made the date a bit uncertain. The outfit not only makes its own product for firms which want commercial screen shorts, but it is planned to rent space to outside producing companies. This sort of a setup, of course, is a natural for television, which will need plenty of film both of a commercial and entertainment nature.

Another project is under way over in Brooklyn. The Lafayette Television & Motion Picture Studios, Inc., or LT-MPS, if you have been properly conditioned by a certain radio program, this week acquired the Elks clubhouse at Lafayette and Oxford streets. The six-story building will be reconverted immediately, within 90 days if possible. Three sound stages 100 feet long and of varying widths and heights will be constructed and the whole plant will represent an outlay of $500,000.

The facilities of this plant will be for rent to any producers of any kind of movies who have the price and inclination. The company is seeking a television channel.

This project recalls the days when there were five leading film studios in Brooklyn. The only one of these remaining is the old vitagraph studio in Flatbush, which Warner Brothers use now as a film laboratory. The disease develops most often in those past 60 years of age. Only one case, among those studied, by those workers, occurred in a person less than 30. It would appear that there was a tendency for the disease to run in families. Sixteen of the patients had 21 relatives with the same disorder.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

EVERY SUNDAY Mrs. Moran came to the Newtons' to get dinner. And once a week Mrs. Moran came in to do the heavy cleaning. She was an energetic, middle-aged woman who, before her marriage, had worked steadily at the Newtons'. Now she obliged, by the day. Jenny had insisted that Gram have one day of comparative peace and so, Sundays when the Newtons returned from church the scent of Mrs. Moran's ineffable cooking filled the house. Gram always seemed astonished. She always hurried in, crying, "Nellie must have come early."

After which she would divest herself of her church-going garments, put on something comfortable—and go into the kitchen to superintend dinner and listen to Mrs. Moran's gossip. Not that Gram ever called it gossip. She abhorred gossip and never encouraged it. But she liked to hear what was going on.

She heard plenty today, sitting in the rocker by the open windows while Mrs. Moran busied herself with the fricassee chicken and opined as how the fowl was a little elderly but still tender enough. Mrs. Moran's niece worked for the Harries and there had been ructions last night, said Mrs. Moran, which brought Lily, startled, bolt upright out of her needed sleep. The Harries had come back from the Country club along with that young limb, Pooch. From all Lily could learn Pooch had been drinking. "At his age!" said Mrs. Moran severely. "and where did he get the stuff, anyway? And not only him, but the Morrison kid and the girls with them." Not that she knew who the girls were, but she pitied their poor mothers.

Jenny went on upstairs. She had a hem to sew, a dozen small Sunday jobs to do. But her needle faltered. She pricked her finger, and the thread broke.

Where was Ede? she thought, looking with unseeing eyes into the new green of the tree outside her window. . . . She couldn't be with Justice. . . . This was Sunday. He would be with his father, with Mary. . . . and his guests.

Had she really gone calling or had she gone to the drug store to phone Justice? Was she saying, even now, "Jenny knows?"

Jenny hadn't thought of that.

She thought, she has too much pride.

No, she hadn't an atom, or how could she speak as she had at the club . . . begging for his attention, his—interest.

Little Red Ridlinghood, Jenny reminded herself, was wolf bait. I won't be. When Ede sees that practically any girl who isn't hard to look at can divert Mr. Wolf . . . she'll cry uncle. She'll stay away from him, in spades.

Jenny thought, She'd better, for if she told the truth, if the Boston incident was an accident, well, she just might get ideas. I've made her plenty mad, and she's always been so darned stubborn. And if it wasn't an accident . . . I've got to prevent its happening again.

Loneliness is no excuse; nor boredom; nor feeling unsure because happiness is brief and waiting long. Maybe the men who fight are uncertain, too, of themselves and the girls they love. Maybe they lie awake in the lethal nights and know a closer, more agonizing fear than that of death. The cure is re-assurance.

She thought, When people have been married a long time, it's different; trust and certainty are part of their scheme, like breathing. Fidelity is perhaps a habit, of the heart, and mind and body. But kids, thought Jenny, feeling old and grieved, what they have to remember is so easy to forget, after a while.

There was one thing she must believe, and that was that Ede and Dick were essentially right for each other and that when he came home Ede would realize it. Whatever she had done, she must then regret for the rest of her life. But that was up to her. That was the price tag. How high the price, she might not know until she saw Dick again. If when she saw him she no longer wanted him, or, if each had outgrown the other, that was something else, and their business. But now Jenny had to go forward on the assumption that one day Dick would come home to a wife who would love and cherish him.

And if he didn't come home?

She shivered and rose slowly from her chair. You can't see into the hearts and minds of the people you know and love. How Ede felt, how she would feel whether he came home or not, was hidden from her sister—probably it would always be so. But meantime—no more trips to Boston.

In the afternoon Steve came by. He walked into the hall and inquired in a muted bellow, "Anyone home?"

They were all out on the screened back porch. Mrs. Moran had gone home, Ede was reading the paper and smoking. Gram was knitting, and Jenny just sitting, slumped in a big wicker chair, all angles and knees. Steve, following their answering chorus, came out to join them, caught Gram up, kissed her, and flipped a hand at the girls.

Jenny sat bolt upright. This was a man who wore his body, looked from his eyes and spoke with his mouth. Not the Steve who laughed, and wisecracked, and saw the funny side of things; but who was, underneath, eager and understanding, confident of life, excited by it.

Ede spoke quickly, "This is a pretty grim conversation for Sunday afternoon."

Steve turned to look at her. He said, "Sorry, old girl," in a voice Jenny remembered. Her face was composed, but her mind made a small grimace. She thought, That's wonderful . . . he's sorry because he believes Ede's thinking about Dick!

Ede said, "That's all right," and pushed aside the papers with the sheets of comics which Jenny read avidly. Ede scolded, and Gram sneaked up to her room Sunday nights.

DIET AND HEALTH

Bone Ills in Older People

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHEN persons approach the middle age period it would appear that there are several disorders which may develop, affecting the bones and joints. Dr. Douglas D. Dickson and his co-workers of Rochester, Minnesota, have made a study of a number of patients with a condition called Paget's disease of the bones or osteitis deformans.

The disease develops most often in those past 60 years of age. Only one case, among those studied, by those workers, occurred in a person less than 30. It would appear that there was a tendency for the disease to run in families. Sixteen of the patients had 21 relatives with the same disorder.

No Complaint

In one-fifth of the patients there was no complaint or disturbance prior to the time the diagnosis was made, the disease being discovered accidentally during the course of X-ray examinations.

In Paget's disease, there is a thickening of the bones. It most often affects the pelvis or hip bones, but also affects the skull and shin bones in many instances. It has been found that in these patients there is an increase in the blood of a substance known as phosphatase which has to do with the use of phosphorus by the body.

Break or Fracture

Break of the bones, or fracture, is a common complication of this disease. However, these fractures seem to heal rapidly. In many cases, there is also a porosity or thinning out of the bone in the skull. Sometimes this condition is the only

X-ray evidence of the disease in the skull.

Although a great deal of study has been carried out, the exact cause of Paget's disease has not been determined, nor has there been found any treatment which will check its progress. Large doses of vitamin D have been employed, with reported benefit in a number of instances.

In a number of patients a condition known as osteoporosis circumscripta was found in the skull. In almost all of these patients there was evidence of Paget's disease in other parts of the skeleton. For this reason, Dr. Dickson and his co-workers believe that osteoporosis circumscripta is an early sign of Paget's disease.

It would appear that a great deal further study of Paget's disease is needed to determine, if possible, what produces it so that methods for its prevention may be developed. But at least some progress is being made.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

O. M.: Would coffee cause a person to have gas?

Answer: The use of coffee would not cause gas unless perhaps it were used in excessive amounts.

B. C.: I have been bothered with a constant flickering sound about the heart. It feels as if my heart is jumping. Would a run-down condition cause this?

Answer: It is possible that you have what is known as palpitation of the heart, or a rapid heart beat. This is due to nervousness in most instances. The fact that your general physical condition is not up to par might be a contributing cause.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—A few lively fellows with money to invest in something besides the stock markets are showing a keen appreciation for the future of television and motion picture making in the New York Metropolitan area. The facilities of this plant will be for rent to any producers of any kind of movies who have the price and inclination. The company is seeking a television channel.

This project recalls the days when there were five leading film studios in Brooklyn. The only one of these remaining is the old vitagraph studio in Flatbush, which Warner Brothers use now as a film laboratory.

All of this doesn't mean that Hollywood is going to have to look to its laurels, but it does point up something that has been apparent right along—that there are several types of movie-making that can be done just as handily in New York as anywhere else. The potential needs of television have opened quite a few eyes.

USO-camp shows last night inaugurated its new program of entertainment for veterans administration hospitals with a show at the Bronx Veterans hospital. Veterans' administrator Gen. Omar N. Bradley was on hand for the ceremonies. There will be 30 units working for the hospital circuit, visiting each of the 97 veterans' hospitals once every two weeks.

One pre-war practice has been ended for the duration of the reconversion period. American universities and colleges are no longer trying to attract more students.

• PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S ORDER curtailing the use of wheat in whiskey and beer will not hurt the drinking public too much.

According to those in the industry distilled spirits may suffer a little in quantity but there will be enough to go around.

Distillers use chiefly the best grades of corn and rye. Wheat was added as a stretcher during the war. Thus, they figure they will not be hit too hard.

There is a possibility, however, that spirits may be conserved for the whiskey output and the production of gin halted as it was during the war.

Brewers say they expected a decreased demand for their brews after the war, so . . . too, are not worrying much.

• THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT wants the ladies of the land to know that their precious nylons are not going overseas while stockingless legs are getting goosepimples from standing in lines to await the sheerest hose.

So Arthur Paul, director of the Office of International Trade, came forward with the figures. He said: Less than one per cent of American nylons go abroad.

In 1945, he said, only 354,000 of the 40,000,000 pairs made in America were diverted to foreign markets.

• THE GOVERNMENT'S NEW HOUSING PROGRAM calling for 1,500,000 pre-fabricated homes in 1946 and 1947 is going to have some tough sledding unless some prompt action is taken to insure their construction.

The reason: "Prefabs" are anathema in many communities. "City Fathers" do not want them and building trades unions, along with suppliers of building materials, are turning up their noses at them.

In fact, scores of cities and towns have city ordinances which prohibit such homes. And unions contend they drastically curtail workers' incomes. But the government is committed to an emergency program of pre-fabricated housing. Numerous industries are ready for mass production.

Wilson Wyatt, dynamic housing expediter, is appealing to unions and communities to remove their barriers. If they don't there may be a clash with the federal government, because the administration is determined to take a long step forward solving the housing shortage quickly.

Observers figure the big scramble may be among Minnesota's ex-Governor Stassen, representing GOP's "left wing" in world policy; Dewey, and former Governor Bricker, Ohio conservative and 1944 vice-presidential choice. If Stassen is beaten, if Dewey is out, and Bricker comes a cropper the waiting man in the background would appear now to be "Big Van."

She thought, She has too much pride.

No, she hadn't an atom, or how could she speak as she had at the club . . . begging for his attention, his—interest.

Little Red Ridinghood, Jenny reminded herself, was wolf bait. I won't be. When Edie sees that practically any girl who can't hard to look at can divert Mr. Wolf . . . she'll cry uncle. She'll stay away from him, in spades.

Jenny thought, She'd better, for if she told the truth, if the Boston incident was an accident, well, she just might get ideas. I've made her plenty mad, and she's always been so darned stubborn. And if it wasn't an accident . . . I've got to prevent its happening again.

Loneliness is no excuse; nor boredom; nor feeling unsure, because happiness is brief and waiting long.

Maybe the men who fight are uncertain, too, of themselves and the girls they love. Maybe they lie awake in the lethal nights and know a closer, more agonizing fear than that of death. The cure is reassurance.

She thought, When people have been married a long time, it's different: trust and certainty are part of their scheme, like breathing. Fidelity is perhaps a habit, of the heart, and mind and body. But kids, thought Jenny, feeling old and grieved, what they have to remember is so easy to forget, after a while.

There was one thing she must believe, and that was that Edie and Dick were essentially right for each other and that when he came home Edie would realize it. Whatever she had done, she must then regret for the rest of her life. But that was up to her. That was the price tag. How high the price, she might not know until she saw Dick again. If when she saw him she no longer wanted him, or if each had outgrown the other, that was something else, and their business. But now Jenny had to go forward on the assumption that one day Dick would come home to a wife who would love and cherish him.

And if he didn't come home?

She shivered and rose slowly from her chair. You can't see into the hearts and minds of the people you know and love. How Edie felt, how she would feel whether he came home or not, was hidden from her sister—probably it would always be so. But meantime—no more trips to Boston.

In the afternoon Steve came by. He walked into the hall and inquired in a muted bellow, "Anyone home?"

They were all out on the screened back porch. Mrs. Moran had gone home. Edie was reading the paper and smoking. Gram was knitting, and Jenny just sitting, slumped in a big wicker chair, all angled and knees. Steve, following their answering chorus, came out to join them, caught Gram up, kissed her, and flipped a hand at the girls.

Edie spoke quickly. "This is a pretty grim conversation for Sunday afternoon."

Steve turned to look at her. He said, "Sorry, old girl," in a voice Jenny remembered. Her face was composed, but her mind made a small grimace. She thought, That's wonderful . . . he's sorry because he believes Edie's thinking about Dick!

Edie said, "That's all right," and pushed aside the papers with the sheets of comics which Jenny read avidly. Edie scolded, and Gram sneaked up to her room Sunday nights.

Bone Ills in Older People

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHEN persons approach the middle age period it would appear that there are several disorders which may develop, affecting the bones and joints. Dr. Douglas D. Dickson and his co-workers of Rochester, Minnesota, have made a study of a number of patients with a condition called Paget's disease of the bones or osteitis deformans.

The disease develops most often in those past 60 years of age. Only one case, among those studied, by those workers, occurred in a person less than 30. It would appear that there was a tendency for the disease to run in families. Sixteen of the patients had 21 relatives with the same disorder.

No Complaint

In one-fifth of the patients there was no complaint or disturbance prior to the time the diagnosis was made, the disease being discovered accidentally during the course of X-ray examinations.

In Paget's disease, there is a thickening of the bones. It most often affects the pelvis or hip bones, but also affects the skull and shin bones in many instances.

It has been found that in those patients there is an increase in the blood of a substance known as phosphatase which has to do with the use of phosphorus by the body.

Break or Fracture

Break of the bones, or fracture, is a common complication of this disease. However, these fractures seem to heal rapidly. In many cases, there is also a porosity or thinning out of the bone in the skull. Sometimes this condition is the only

X-ray evidence of the disease in the skull.

Although a great deal of study has been carried out, the exact cause of Paget's disease has not been determined, nor has there been found any treatment which will check its progress. Large doses of vitamin D have been employed, with reported benefit in a number of instances.

In a number of patients a condition known as osteoporosis circumscripta was found in the skull. In almost all of these patients there was evidence of Paget's disease in other parts of the skeleton. For this reason, Dr. Dickson and his co-workers believe that osteoporosis circumscripta is an early sign of Paget's disease.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

O. M.: Would coffee cause a person to have gas?

Answer: The use of coffee would not cause gas unless perhaps it were used in excessive amounts.

B. C.: I have been bothered with a constant flickering sound about the heart. It feels as if my heart is jumping. Would a run-down condition cause this?

Answer: It is possible that you have what is known as palpitation of the heart, or a rapid heart beat. This is due to nervousness in most instances. The fact that your general physical condition is not up to par might be a contributing cause.

PRIMARY PLANS SHAPING IN OHIO

Lausche Not Expected To Make Any Campaign For Nomination

COLUMBUS, Feb. 21—Primary campaign plans for the governorship of Ohio were gradually coming into focus today and the current picture presented a kaleidoscopic jumble similar to some modern art.

The empty spaces in the picture will be caused by a lack of a primary campaign by Gov. Frank J. Lausche. Although the governor has made no announcement it was understood that he will not conduct any primary exhibitions.

Joseph Torok, Youngstown grocer, will provide the subdued background in the Democratic gubernatorial race.

The colorful splash in the picture will be provided by Cleveland's Thomas J. Herbert, who is certain to be the Republican nominee for governor.

Herbert, who has been endorsed on a state-wide GOP "harmony ticket," sounded the keynote of the Republican campaign in a recent speech at Cleveland when he charged that Lausche was operating a do-nothing administration.

Vets Show Fine Work At Ohio U.

ATHENS, Ohio, Feb. 21—The World War II veteran, back at Ohio University to resume his studies, gets down to work quickly and his grades are as good or better than the average civilian student, Dr. Victor Whitehouse, coordinator of veterans' affairs, revealed today.

After studying the grades of the 215 veterans who attended Ohio the first semester, Dr. Whitehouse found many "A's" and "B's" and very few "F's".

Study Of

"The average veteran is not finding studying as hard as he feared and his grades show he is making good," said the coordinator, himself a World War I veteran.

A total of 1034 veterans, including 16 women, are enrolled this semester, causing the largest mid-year enrollment jump in the university's history. Two-hundred and seventy-eight of the student-veterans are married.

Dr. Whitehouse's contact with the ex-servicemen has convinced him, he said, that the average veteran is quite appreciative of the opportunity the government has given him to continue his education through the GI Bill of Rights.

"I have noticed that the veteran knows what he wants in the way of education. And that primarily deals with subjects leading to a definite vocation and job. The majority of ex-servicemen at Ohio have enrolled in the Colleges of Engineering and Commerce. However, they want some subjects in the cultural field, too."

Housing Only Problem

"It is somewhat of a myth to say that the veteran has created a peculiar problem for educators, except that the housing situation has become acute in most instances. That is particularly true on Ohio's campus," he explained.

The coordinator said most veterans are more serious than the average student. "That is natural, for his associations with older men have given him mature judgment. You can't expect anyone to have been on a bombing

PRIMARY PLANS SHAPING IN OHIO

Lausche Not Expected To Make Any Campaign For Nomination

COLUMBUS, Feb. 21—Primary campaign plans for the governorship of Ohio were gradually coming into focus today and the current picture presented a kaleidoscopic jumble similar to some modern art.

The empty spaces in the picture will be caused by a lack of a primary campaign by Gov. Frank J. Lausche. Although the governor has made no announcement it was understood that he will not conduct any primary exhibitions.

Joseph Tork, Youngstown grocer, will provide the subdued background in the Democratic gubernatorial race.

The colorful splash in the picture will be provided by Cleveland's Thomas J. Herbert, who is certain to be the Republican nominee for governor.

Herbert, who has been endorsed on a state-wide GOP "harmony ticket," sounded the keynote of the Republican campaign in a recent speech at Cleveland when he charged that Lausche was operating a do-nothing administration.

Vets Show Fine Work At Ohio U.

ATHENS, Ohio, Feb. 21—The World War II veteran, back at Ohio University to resume his studies, gets down to work quickly and his grades are as good or better than the average civilian student, Dr. Victor Whitehouse, coordinator of veterans' affairs, revealed today.

After studying the grades of the 215 veterans who attended Ohio the first semester, Dr. Whitehouse found many "A's" and "B's" and very few "F's".

Study Of

"The average veteran is not finding studying as hard as he feared and his grades show he is making good," said the coordinator, himself a World War I veteran.

A total of 1034 veterans, including 16 women, are enrolled this semester, causing the largest mid-year enrollment jump in the university's history. Two-hundred and seventy-eight of the student-veterans are married.

Dr. Whitehouse's contact with the ex-servicemen has convinced him, he said, that the average veteran is quite appreciative of the Daisy dancing while Buddy sang his original songs. Later, one of his compositions, "The Big Apple," clicked and brought him to New York, where he subsequently wrote such hits as "Hurry Home," "Poinciana" and "Our Love." Daisy followed him to New York, and landed a dancing role in Max Gordon's "Sing Out the News." Waring saw the show, liked a small singing bit that she did, and hired her.

Frank DeVol, who records for Capitol Records between Ginny Simms programs, is cutting his first series of platters with Jerry Colonna this week. They're comedy numbers.

Writer Joan Murphy, recently discovered for radio by Producer Martha Rountree, made such a hit as "Girl of the Week" on Miss Rountree's show, "Leave It To The Girls," that audiences are demanding a quick return of the witty, twenty-two year old authoress. Miss Murphy, whose latest story, "Gramward and the Captain," appears in the March issue of "Seventeen," is now in such demand as a guest by radio producers that she is toying with the idea of abandoning her typewriter in favor of the mike.

On Ted Malone's last broadcast in January he asked listeners to watch their February calendars and check the day in that month which brought the most good fortune. Later, he said, he wanted his fans to forward the dates and he would determine if a wave of happiness swept the nation at any particular time during the month. Mail pouring in assures the human-interest reporter thousands of people are intrigued with his novel idea and are carefully abiding by the rules of his game.

What Tille, the titan-tressed typewriter tapper, can't understand is how come those "Operation Muskox" people feel they need to go 'way up into the Arctic looking for weather when around here we've had nothing else but sun.

DETROIT POLICE report the arm of 10-year-old Richard Sejewski, above, may not grow as a result of a belt-and-buckle beating allegedly inflicted by his father, Leo. The 30-year-old parent must appear before recorder's court on a warrant charging child beating. The boy's mother, Esther, told police she is going to get a divorce as soon as her husband is sentenced. (International)
